

BENJAMIN POGRUND

Robert Sobukwe was my close friend of ^{nearly} 20 years' standing.

I have written this because I have personal knowledge of many of the events during the last months of his life. Where I was not directly involved, I know many of the people who were.

~~I have written this because of the shame I feel at the way he was treated by the Government of our country.~~

/ends

~~A QUESTION must be asked about Robert Sobukwe: Did his banning in the name of apartheid help to kill him?~~

~~Is it an unfair question?~~

Robert

A doctor who treated ~~the~~ Sobukwe tells me that the cancer from which he died on February 27 at the age of 53 was incurable; that, once found, it was too late to do anything about it.

That could be. But against this is the fact that, as a result of the ~~ban~~ on him bannings imposed since 1969, Mr Sobukwe could not at first freely seek medical advice. It was several months before his illness was properly diagnosed. By then it was certainly too late to save his life.

~~The last few months of his life were also not made any easier by the Government. He was hounded, even after he had undergone major surgery.~~

I want to set out what happened, ~~.. Then people can decide for themselves whether the question about his death is fair or not.~~

Mr Sobukwe was jailed in 1960 for three years for incitement following the anti-pass campaign launched by his organisation, the Pan-Africanist Congress.

When his sentence ended he was taken to Robben Island Prison ~~under~~ ^{in terms of} special legislation rushed through Parliament. He was kept there for the next six years, without trial.

In 1969 he was released. He was taken to Kimberley, a strange place to him. He was placed under ^{night-time} house arrest, ~~at night~~. He was banned from attending meetings and social gatherings. He was not allowed to enter schools or factories. He had to obtain special permission to enter the courts when he began to qualify as an attorney.

Nothing he said could be quoted. He was not allowed to leave Kimberley without permission.

The first five-year banning expired in 1974. It was renewed by order of the Minister of Justice for a further five years.

During June and July last year, Mr Sobukwe was coughing a lot. The doctors he consulted in Kimberley could not do anything to help him. ~~It was~~ He thought he had flu. As a close friend in regular touch on the phone, I kept urging him to apply for permission to come to Johannesburg to see a specialist.

He was reluctant because he thought he would not get permission. When he finally did so, late in July, permission was refused.

I immediately went to Kimberley to see him, and was so worried about his condition that as soon as I returned home, (and acting with his approval,) I phoned the Minister of Justice, Mr Jimmy Kruger, at his office.

It took several days to get hold of Mr Kruger. But when I finally reached him he was helpful. Within the hour he phoned me back to say Mr Sobukwe could come to Johannesburg to see a doctor. But not that weekend; it was too soon.

(week ~~later~~)
It would have to be the week after.

It was agreed that Mr Sobukwe would arrive on a Saturday and stay (overnight) at my home, that he would not go anywhere except to see the specialist I had specified (a leading physician in the city), and that the only people whom I would allow at my home would be members of my immediate family.

These arrangements made, the situation later changed. ~~things then started turning nasty.~~ First there was a stipulation, conveyed to Mr Sobukwe some days later, that the specialist ~~him~~ examine Mr ~~Sobukwe~~ in my house. I went back to Mr Kruger, explaining that the doctor needed the special equipment at his surgery for the examination. A flurry of phone calls, and the afternoon before Mr Sobukwe was due in Johannesburg the Security Police phoned me to say all right, he could go to the doctor's rooms after all. But straight from the rooms to my home,

At that stage I ~~was simply~~ ^{felt} too intimidated to ask for permission for Mr Sobukwe to have X-rays taken in Johannesburg. It would have meant going to see another doctor. I was scared that if ^{we} I asked for anything more, for another concession, the permission for him to come to Johannesburg would be withdrawn.

This might sound ridiculous. But it was the atmosphere in which I was operating. I was begging for favours, always ^{aware} ~~conscious~~ that anywhere in the apparatus of power with which I was dealing someone could peremptorily say no.

Even my request for Mr Sobukwe to fly back to Kimberley at 3.30 pm on the Sunday instead of on the early flight was turned down - and it was done abrasively, with a curt warning that if I didn't like it, he would have to take an early Saturday afternoon flight. So poor Bob, tired and ill, had to be up early on the Sunday for the 9.30 am plane.

X-rays were not available for the examination. We had not been able to obtain any from Kimberley. The specialist's diagnosis at that stage, based on the limited tools available to him, was that Mr Sobukwe was suffering from a weakening of the heart muscles caused by a bacterial infection. Alarming but not desperate. I sent the report to Mr Kruger ~~for a confidential basis~~ ~~so that he would~~

About three weeks later, however, X-rays taken in Kimberley reached Johannesburg. The physician who had seen Mr Sobukwe diagnosed cancer.

I was overseas at the time but when my wife gave me the news on the phone I told her to contact Mr Kruger to ensure that Bob Sobukwe could be free of restriction in being treated.

Doctors were also in touch with Mr Kruger and on ^{Friday} September 9 / he announced that Mr Sobukwe could have medical treatment by any doctor in any hospital in the country.

That weekend, arrangements were made for Mr Sobukwe to go to Cape Town's Groote Schuur Hospital.

Returning from overseas, on September 12 / I wrote to Mr Kruger to protest against the fact that he had made public the fact of Mr Sobukwe's ill health. Mr Sobukwe's illness should surely have been his own private concern until such time as he (or his family or close friends acting on his authority) chose to disclose it, I said.

~~I was angry and distressed because, knowing how we had had to overcome obstacles and now facing the desperation of Mr Sobukwe's condition, I believed Mr Kruger was seeking to put himself in the clear to show how considerate he was. I was also upset, as were the SOBUKWES, because their children in America - two were studying there then - did not at that stage know their father was so ill.~~

Mr Kruger, on September 27, replied that he had issued his statement because background circumstances had warranted it, ~~and~~ ^{and that} he had not in any event disclosed the nature of the illness. He told me not to approach him directly again

~~His~~ ^{More} ~~business was still to come~~

~~Even~~ ^{The day after} Mr Sobukwe was admitted to Groote Schuur the Security Police ~~was~~ ^{arrived there}

~~visiting. They wanted to see him but were turned away by the doctors.~~ They ~~police~~ ordered the doctors not to allow Mr Sobukwe to have any visitors except ^{were} his immediate family. The doctors, ^{and} incensed at the intrusion, told the police that Mr Sobukwe was their patient and they would decide who he could or could not see.

From then on, during the weeks that Mr Sobukwe spent in the hospital, there was a constant flow of visitors for him. Some were old friends; many were people from the townships who ~~simply~~ came along to pay their respects, ^{often simply standing quietly at the door to look at him.}

^{a month} Friday, October 14, the day he was temporarily discharged from hospital ^{after having had a lung removed,} became a nightmare for him.

Eleven days before, Mrs Sobukwe had applied to the magistrate in Cape Town for permission for her husband to stay at the home of ^(a relative) ~~friends~~ ~~either with~~ the ^{Rt} ~~Right~~ Rev Pat Matolengwe, ~~the~~ Anglican Bishop-Suffragan, or with a white friend.

^(Dr Alex Boraine MP) She twice inquired about the matter but received no reply. On October 12 ~~and~~ ^(with Mr Kruger's secretary) took it up and was told the application had been referred to Kimberley, from where it had been referred to Pretoria. ^{No decision was yet amicable.}

On October 13, Mrs Sobukwe was still phoning Kimberley's Security Police in an effort to find out what the position was.

At lunchtime on Friday, October 14 the Bishop fetched Mr Sobukwe from hospital and took him to his Newlands home. About an hour later, two Security policemen arrived. Mrs Sobukwe says they ^{wanted} ~~came~~ to see her husband. She told them he was in the toilet and ^(asked them to sit down) ~~asked them to sit down~~. But they tried to push past her to get to him. There was a scuffle which ended when Mr Sobukwe himself appeared. "My husband was a man of peace," Mrs Sobukwe explains.

The police presented ^{an order} ~~a~~ from Mr Kruger: Mr Sobukwe either had to return to Kimberley or to hospital. Immediately. [He was weak and barely able to walk properly. It was his first day on his feet since the operation. Mrs Sobukwe begged that he be allowed to rest. He also had a dread of returning to hospital. Despite the good attention he had there, the ward was ^{confined} ~~dark~~ and the windows faced ^{yearned for} ~~wanted~~ onto an inner courtyard. He ~~wanted~~ the sun.

While Mrs Sobukwe tried to contact people who could help, the police left.

They phoned about an hour later to check if he was still there. Mr Sobukwe had No choice but to return to hospital that afternoon.

~~He then phoned Dr Boraine~~ ^(again) Dr Boraine became involved.

So did Prof Chris Barnard who telephoned H.K. King.

On Saturday morning, the first order was that Mr Sobukwe was not allowed to leave the hospital grounds. Then one of the doctors treating him received permission to take him for a drive. Then the doctor was given permission to take him to his home - and Mr Sobukwe was allowed to stay there.

^{for} But not long. Unfortunately, a few days before Mr Sobukwe had to be re-admitted to hospital, the doctor moved out of his house. Permission for Mr Sobukwe to stay with friends was again refused. He was only allowed to stay at the Holiday Inn on the edge of the city. He and his wife moved in there.

After his second hospital stay, Mr Sobukwe went back to Kimberley. Early in January, he was due again at Groote Schuur. Again, he was not allowed to stay with friends but was required to stay at the Holiday Inn before going into hospital.

The Holiday Inn, however, said it did not have accommodation available.

What to do? Luckily, the doctor with whom he had previously stayed could once more offer his home.

The official document allowing Mr Sobukwe to go to Cape Town carried these stipulations:

Before leaving Kimberley he had to report to the Security Police. When he arrived in Cape Town he had to report to the police. On his discharge from hospital he had to return to Kimberley on the first available train (in practice, this could be a plane). He had to report his departure to the police in Cape Town, and his arrival to the police in Kimberley.

"He could hardly walk because of his back-ache", says Mrs Sobukwe. "Friends took us from the airport in Cape Town. He struggled to move slowly to the charge office to report that he was around. It was painful".

There was never an end to it. Only his death brought an end.

ends/

PUBLISHER:

Publisher:- Historical Papers, The Library, University of the Witwatersrand

Location:- Johannesburg

©2010

LEGAL NOTICES:

Copyright Notice: All materials on the Historical Papers website are protected by South African copyright law and may not be reproduced, distributed, transmitted, displayed, or otherwise published in any format, without the prior written permission of the copyright owner.

Disclaimer and Terms of Use: Provided that you maintain all copyright and other notices contained therein, you may download material (one machine readable copy and one print copy per page) for your personal and/or educational non-commercial use only.

People using these records relating to the archives of Historical Papers, The Library, University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, are reminded that such records sometimes contain material which is uncorroborated, inaccurate, distorted or untrue. While these digital records are true facsimiles of paper documents and the information contained herein is obtained from sources believed to be accurate and reliable, Historical Papers, University of the Witwatersrand has not independently verified their content. Consequently, the University is not responsible for any errors or omissions and excludes any and all liability for any errors in or omissions from the information on the website or any related information on third party websites accessible from this website.

DOCUMENT DETAILS:

Document ID:- A2618-Cn2-5

Document Title:- Essay about Sobukwe's illness (original, typed and annotated)

Author:- Benjamin Pogund

Document Date:- undated